HONGKONG, OCTOBER 14TH, 1873.

THE legal appointments which have been made provisionally to carry out the new ordinances will, we doubt not, meet with the general approval of the community. The Hon. Mr. PAUNCEFOTE, from his long experience in the Colony, and his lengthened practice at the bar, was naturally singled out as a suitable person for the next appointment to a judgeship; and the public have a good earnest of his capacity for filling such a post efficiently in the manner in which a short time back be performed the duties of Acting Chief-Justice. Mr. PAUNCEFOTE has also long been recognised by the profeshas always shown great care in regard to all cases which have come before him. of Attorney-General with ability, and was entitled to an appointment not only on that account, but for having on two occasions fitled the post of Acting Judge of the Summary Court with-care and ability, and generally with satisfaction to the community.

The appointments are at present unde only provisionally, but we doubt not that they will be confirmed, as it is not likely that the Colonial office will go counter to the recommendation of the Governor, in regard to appointments in respect to which a knowledge of the local requirements of the Colony is so necessary, and in which, consequently, His Excellency, being upon the spot, is naturally able to form the best judgment. .. The present is a suitable opportunity to again advocate an alteration in one of the legal departments, which has been frequently urged in these columns, namely, that the office of Attorney-General should be made au entirely independent one, that is, that an adequate salary should be paid to that officer, and that he should not take private practice. In a small place like Hongkong, it is extremely desirable that the Attorney- Hongkong and Shanghai Bank through his General should be entirely independent. It debts. may often happen that he may be called upon to act in his official capacity in regard appeared to oppose, he would look on the case to matters which may arise out of a civil suit ; and if he take private practice, it may easily happen that he be retained on a side which after a time it might be his duty to prosecute. If the reverse of this is the fact, as in the celebrated Moosa conspiracy case, where Mr. Ball, Acting as Attorney-General, was retained as a private advocate to prosecute, there is an appearance of a Government officer giving an eagerness to a prospection which for the prestige and high standing of all connected with the administration of justice, is clearly undesirable. There is also another weighty reason why the Attorney-General should be separated entirely from private practice. The CHIEF-JUSTICE gave some cogent reasons for there being three with another named Wong-a-shap, and that proper repair the river side road in that quarjudges in order to decide in cases of appeal, but as this would add very greatly to the expenses of the Colony, the suggestion was not antive place, Kah-ying-chow, and from thence 60, whose ideas of "earning an honest liveliacted upon. If, however, the Attorney-General were entirely free from all connection with private practice, he would form a the absconded Wong-lan was wholly the master very suitable porson to act as the third judge, and this difficulty, which the CHEF-JUSTICE fendant could prove by Wong-a-pang, the Some years ago be was convicted of kidnappointed out as likely to arise when there Tepo of the village. twere only two judges sitting in appeal and the evidence of plaintiff tended to show that a considerable term of inprisonment. Mr. Bond, of Ber- is quite the lioness of the neighbourhood. monday, and then Mr. Dunn of Rotherhithe, and then Mr. Bentley, of Wapping, had to leave the box sorely discountied, was palafully apparent; nor did the learned counsel recover his equanimity until Mr. Champion-a very sheet abeliar of "the Orton case"-presented bimself to the Court, and "swore up to his proof" in the most gratifying manuer. As far back as 1827 Mr. Champion was, it seems, owner of several vessels that plied between the London Dooks and Cadiz, and used to deal with old Mr. Orton for meat-be lind, indeed, bad dealings with him for 18 good years off and on, and had been a friend quite as much as a, customer. Did Mr. Champion remember Arthur Orton ? Yes, that he did. He was the clumsicst, awkwardest boy he had never known, and used to straddle about as if he were going to lurch over the bulwarks. He was as stupid ; boy'as could be, into the bargain; and old Orton used to say, "Thampion," said he, "I don't bales Hemp, 2,883 bage Rice, 2,970 packages know what to do with that boy of mine. Sundries. He won't even try to read or write;" and then Mr. Champion would roply, as it might be "Orton, your boy improves a little, I think; but certainly he is the orkidest boy as ever was." Having known Arthur from his babyhood, Mr. Observious had paid attention to the case; and having interviewed the defendant with especial care, had come to a very distinct opinion. "He is no more Arthur Orton," said be "that I am;" and his cross examination, the tone of which in no way impugned his credibility, only served to bring out his conviction the more clearly. "The defendant," said be, in reply to a subtle suggestion on the part of Mr. Screent Party "no. more resembles Arthur Orton than I do. There is not the least resemblance in him to any of the Ortons. Do I say 'No?' Yes? I do; and I mean it." So ran Mr. Champion's evidence. Mr. James-Begg, who followed, was less fortunate. He had known the Ortons well, and was certain the defendant was not Arthur; but in the skilful hands of Mr. Hawkins be found himself making first one statement and then another; and his suffering at last become so soute that he gave vent to a Cyclopean groun of anguish worthy of Polyphemus with his eye out, and which so convulsed the Court that it had no breath left for isughter when the nnhappy victim went on to admit that he wasn't at all sure what he was like himself twenty years ago. Another witness—one Mr. Tully, un enginour-was more discreet and wary. As soon as the buttery of cross-examination was opened upon him in full play, he assumed an German philosopher evolving a camel from the depths of his inner consciousness. "What are you thinking about now?" said Mr. Hawkins, in his "rallying" tone. "Thinkin," replied the witness, "of havin' somethin' to eat when I get out o' here." "Are you hungry, then P" asked On LONDON. the learned coursel. "Gettin that way," was

This witness, who On Calcutta.—Bank, 3 days' sight 225 gave his evidence in a very honest and straight. On SHANGHAL. forward manner, deposed most positively that he remembered Arthur Orton perfectly well, and that the defendant in no way resembled him. The last witness, and the most important, was a Mr. Woolnough, who is at present a stationer at Croydon, but who between 1851 and 1861 kept a store at Reedy Crock, near Kilmore, in Australia, At Reedy Creek was, n butcher called M'Manus, and in M'Manus's employ was a slaughterman called Arthur. Of this same "Arthur" the witness had a distinct recollection, and he was quite travelling trader. certain not only that the defendant was not be. but that he in no way resembled bim. "Is he Arthur Orton fo asked Dr. Kenealy. " No. was that emphatic reply; and down sat the learned Doctor with all the air of a whist player who has led his ace of trumps. Mr. Hawkins, of course, rose at once to see what outld be got out of the witness in the way of cross-examination. The gross-examination, however, was not concluded when the Court rose, and it would, consequently, be unfair to auticipate its results. There were cutspaws during the day, even if there was no storm; the most notable occurring in the course of the re-examination of Captuin Champion. Serjeant Parry had asked this witness whether he had ever seen either Mr. Whalley or Mr. Guildford Ondow. Accordingly, Dr. Kenealy asked, in re-oxamination, whether there was any foundation for the suggestion that he had been bribed. "Well." burst out Serjeant Parry, "that is the most --- " " Most what, Serjeant Parry ? " cried out Dr. Kenealy. "I would rather not say," was the quiet roply. "Well, then, I had rather you did say," was the quick retort. "I speak my mind, and I had rather you spoke yours." Amenities such as these not only enliven the day's proceedings, but also tend to increase that esteem and confidence in which the profession is held by the general public.

ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY, PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Orinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are bere given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast, oconomy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margine and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications. To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration. Chalmers' Vocabularly contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medburst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilet this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese charac. RICHELIEU.

If Richelieu was a redoubtable enemy, he was the most constant and generous of best openings we can find; the swell lifts the service, he thought no praise excessive no recompense, too splendid. And his government had one characteristic which distinguishes it honourably, not only from all contemporary governments, but from the governments of all other leading States of Europe down to quite recent times. This was the entire absence of religious intolerance. A devout believer in the creed of the Church, in which he held exalted rank, and in an age. This danger being averted, there is a pause, - when religious animosities were running in which every heart feels grateful to a mercihigh, he knew no distinction of belief in the service of the State. It is a striking satire upon the value of the claims to our admiration advanced most boldly by writers of eminence on behalf of communities of men, and accepted by these communities themselves with the most complacent confidence; a curious example of the irony of history, that the principle of religious freedom, which Protestant nations always unde their peculiar boast, and almost always repressed by cunning systems of savage intolerance, one of which, framed by the most powerful and free of them all, has been described by a great. MILTON'S PROSE AND POETRY. We saw how, from the bright screnity and sweet, calm cadence of his early poems Milton, it the call of duty, passed into the agitated atmosphere of his prose writings. We now see him returning to a still intellectual region, and subjecting those energies which, in his prose, had revealed their wild, almost savage strength, to the finer, severer discipline of poetic melody. One figures him as a Homoric warrior, who, in the cool of dawn, mounted his chariot and practised his horses in proud. measured pacings by the river bank; who heard suddenly the cry of combat, turned his coursers' heads to the fray, and, through long hours of conflict, arred them on the memy; and who, last of all, when the struggle was over, and shadows lengthened in the vostering sun, reined them up in measured pacing as of the morning, only that now, in the grandour of their tread, there was the memory of battle. Realise it by what imagery we may, there is a difference; there is also an affinity, between Milton's prose and his poetry, which, if we would understand him. we must apprehend. Had he left us only his poetry, we should have had little surmise of the tramendous strength that lay in him. We can now see that, both in the poetry and the prose, we have Milton, another, yet the same. In the prose the torrent foams, leaps, rages, tosses rocks about; in the poetry the torrout sings a song. In the prose, the tempest hurtles through the air, driving the leaves; in the poetry the great wind is imprisoned in the breast and plumes of a heaven with grave sweet melody .- From The Con-

Large streams of ice scud pass, and we tack through the little vessel aloft and brings her down upon w great piece of ice with a force which sends her shivering from stem to stern, but her stanch timbers are equal to the shock, and she seems none the worse. Now we miss stays and make a stern board, losing our headway. This endangers our rudder, but it is stoutly built, and resists the hardest knocks. We get her round, and run at high speed between two We were now forced to make fast to some ice, and in a short time we were in a son of water privileges which they abused to the sides was like a law wall opposed to the outside waves .- From "The Gateway to the
